INTRODUCTION

Established in 1979 through a constitutional amendment by the Mississippi Legislature and the State's voters, the Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance serves to uphold judicial standards, investigate allegations of judicial misconduct or disability, and protect both the public and the judiciary from misconduct and unfounded claims.

The Commission's jurisdiction encompasses all state-level judicial officers, including those serving on the Mississippi Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, Circuit Courts, Chancery Courts, County Courts, Municipal Courts, Justice Courts, and any other judicial officers performing state functions.

Comprised of seven members, the Commission includes one circuit court judge, one chancery court judge, one county court judge, one justice court judge, two laypersons with no judicial or legal background, and one practicing attorney with a minimum of ten years of experience in Mississippi. Each member, along with an appointed alternate, serves a six-year term, after their initial term, ensuring a diverse range of perspectives from the judiciary, legal community, and the public in evaluating complaints.

The Commission's primary objectives are to protect the public, enforce rigorous judicial conduct standards, and maintain confidence in the judiciary's integrity and independence. Complaints can be submitted by any individual, including litigants, attorneys, law enforcement officers, and concerned citizens who believe a judge has engaged in misconduct or is impaired in their duties. To facilitate accessibility, the Commission accepts written complaints via its website, email, mail, or fax; however, verbal complaints are not accepted.

Judicial misconduct is primarily defined by Section 177A of the Mississippi Constitution and the Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct. Such misconduct may involve bias, inappropriate demeanor, denying parties a fair opportunity to present their cases, or failing to render decisions promptly and fairly. Upon receiving a complaint with specific allegations that could constitute misconduct, the Commission is obligated to conduct an investigation. If the complaint is found to lack merit or pertains to legal interpretations best addressed through appellate review, it will be dismissed. Throughout this process, strict confidentiality is maintained, with complaints becoming public records only when submitted to the Mississippi Supreme Court for review.

I extend my gratitude to the judiciary, court staff, legal professionals, and the public for their support in enabling the Commission to fulfill its constitutional mandate. Special thanks are due to the Commission's staff and members for their unwavering dedication to ensuring public trust in our judicial system. For any inquiries regarding the Commission's work or this report, please feel free to contact our office.

Sincerely,

Executive Director

TYPES OF COMPLAINTS THE COMMISSION MAY CONSIDER

The Mississippi Commission on Judicial Performance carefully evaluates various types of complaints to ensure fairness, judicial accountability, and adherence to ethical standards. Complaints typically fall into three categories: judicial misconduct, physical or mental disability, and matters outside the Commission's jurisdiction. Each complaint undergoes a thorough review and investigation to maintain the integrity of the judiciary.

1. Judicial Misconduct

The Mississippi Code of Judicial Conduct establishes ethical standards for judges, governing their behavior both on and off the bench. Judicial misconduct can take several forms, including:

A. Improper Courtroom Behavior

Judges are expected to maintain professionalism and fairness in the courtroom. Complaints in this category may involve inappropriate demeanor, mistreatment of attorneys, litigants, witnesses, or other participants in the judicial process. Examples include racist or sexist remarks, sleeping on the bench, inattentiveness, or substance abuse. Additionally, judges may be disciplined for administrative failures, such as unduly delaying rulings or neglecting cases under advisement.

B. Improper or Illegal Influence

Judges must remain impartial and base their rulings solely on the evidence presented in a case. Canon 2B of the Code of Judicial Conduct prohibits judges from allowing personal, familial, social, or political relationships to influence their decisions. Canon 3E further mandates that judges recuse themselves from cases where they or their family members have a personal interest in the outcome.

Improper influence may include accepting gifts, bribes, loans, or favors that could compromise judicial independence. Additionally, Canon 3B(7) prohibits ex parte communications, where a judge engages in private discussions about a case with one party without the other party's knowledge or participation.

C. Improper Conduct Outside the Courtroom

A judge's ethical obligations extend beyond the courtroom. Canon 4A permits the Commission to investigate behaviors in a judge's personal or professional life that could undermine public confidence in the judiciary. Such conduct may include criminal activity, inappropriate speech or affiliations, lewd behavior, or any action that could compromise the integrity of judicial office.

D. Other Violations

This category encompasses a broad range of judicial misconduct, including interference in attorney-client relationships, expressions of bias or prejudice, improper campaign activities, public commentary on pending cases, failure to disqualify from cases where a conflict of interest exists, or using judicial authority to advance personal interests.

2. Physical or Mental Disability

The Commission also reviews allegations regarding a judge's physical or mental fitness to serve. Complaints may involve conditions such as alcohol or substance abuse, debilitating illnesses, mental health disorders, or cognitive decline. If there is reasonable cause to believe a judge is impaired, the Commission has the authority to require an evaluation by a licensed physician of its choosing.

3. Complaints Outside the Commission's Jurisdiction

The Commission frequently receives complaints from individuals dissatisfied with a judge's ruling. However, the Commission does not have the authority to modify, reverse, or review judicial decisions—that responsibility belongs to the appellate courts.

Additionally, the Commission does not have the authority to determine whether a judge should recuse themselves from a case, as this issue is also within the jurisdiction of appellate courts. Finally, the Commission does not oversee complaints against federal judges, as those matters fall under the jurisdiction of the federal judicial disciplinary system.

Through its investigative and enforcement authority, the Commission ensures that complaints within its jurisdiction are addressed while upholding the independence and fairness of Mississippi's judicial system.

COMPLAINT PROCESS

The Commission follows a structured and transparent process when handling allegations of judicial misconduct. From the initial review to formal proceedings, each step reflects a commitment to due diligence, fairness, and justice.

Filing a Complaint

The process begins when the Commission receives a written complaint alleging judicial misconduct. Complaint forms are available by mail, fax, and email, and can also be accessed and submitted electronically through the Commission's website at <https://www.judicialperformance.ms.gov>.

Initial Review

Upon receiving a complaint, a staff member reviews it to confirm that the allegations are against a sitting state court judge. If the complaint falls within the Commission's jurisdiction, it is assigned a case number. A written notification is sent to the complainant acknowledging receipt of the complaint, providing the case number, and informing them of the date the Commission will review it. Prior to the Commission meeting, members receive copies of the complaints for review.

Commission Review

At the Commission's regularly scheduled meetings, complaints are formally reviewed. The Commission may dismiss a complaint due to a lack of evidence, because it involves matters subject to appellate review, or because it falls outside its jurisdiction. If the Commission determines there is a possibility of judicial misconduct, it orders an investigation. Written notification of the Commission's decision is provided to the complainant.

Investigation

During the investigation, witnesses are interviewed, relevant documents are collected and examined, and an investigative file is compiled. The assigned investigator has two months to complete their findings and present them to the Commission at its next meeting.

Subsequent Commission Review

Following the investigation, the Commission may take one of the following actions, with written notification provided to all relevant parties:

- Dismiss the complaint for the reasons cited above.
- Dismiss the complaint but issue a letter of instruction to the judge.
- Determine there is probable cause to file a formal complaint.

Formal Complaint Proceedings

If a formal complaint is filed, the judge is served with a written copy of the complaint and has 30 days to respond. The judge has the right to legal representation. Following this, the judge and the Commission may enter settlement negotiations or proceed to a hearing.

In a formal hearing, the judge has the opportunity to present evidence and call up to two-character witnesses. A three-member panel then determines whether the judge committed misconduct or dismisses the case. Written notification of the panel's decision is sent to the judge and the complainant.

Mississippi Supreme Court Review

If the panel finds that misconduct has occurred, the Commission may take informal action or submit a written recommendation for disciplinary measures to the Mississippi Supreme Court. The Supreme Court reviews the Commission's findings and may either uphold the recommendation, impose a greater or lesser sanction, or dismiss the case.

Potential Sanctions:

- Memorandum of Understanding
- Private Admonishment
- Public Reprimand
- Suspension
- Fine
- Removal from Office

This rigorous process ensures that allegations of judicial misconduct are thoroughly examined while maintaining the integrity of the judicial system. All parties involved receive written notifications at each stage of the process, reinforcing the Commission's commitment to transparency and due process.
